How many names are there? A: You could add the counter as the first element of the array, and increment it while reading the file: `$names = []; $buffer = ""; $count = 1; while (feof($fp)) { $line = fgets($fp); if ($line === false) { break; } $names[] = $line; $buffer.= $line; $count++; } $buf = trim($buffer); $buf = explode(" ", $buf); for ($i = 0; $i < count($buf); $i++) { echo $names[$i] . " " . $buf[$i] . "\n"; }`

Printing correctly a string as output in C Well i'm writing a program for a project in C on which the purpose of it is to convert integer to strings. if the integer is bigger than 2 digits. I write as output the first 2 digits, for example 2AA, then i have to increment the first digit and print the 2 digits again. Im calling the function for example : `str2int(16)`; So i have to print it like this : 16 2AA 16 2AA My problem is that when i print the strings, i can only see the last one and the if i change the digit to print the numbers correctly i will get the number as the source of the integer. for exemple this is the code i'm using : `void str2int(int num){ char *n; n = malloc(sizeof(num)); printf(" %d", num); int first_digit, second_digit = 0, count; char *str; if (num 10000)`
